the ground upon which the former Grace Snell, daughter of the murdered Chicago millionaire, seeks liberty. Three times Grace Snell married and divorced her first husband, Frank Nixon Coffin. This extraordinary matrimonial experience, rather than her devotion to the writing of romantic fiction, or her being sued for the purchase price of cigarettes and jewelry, or her bankruptcy for $53,000, has spread her name to the country.

James C. Walker was husband No. 3, Perkins A. Layman was No. 5, and Hugh M. Love No. 6, Her husband Noe. 1, 2 and 4 was Frank N. Coffin.

No such explanation appeals to Mrs. Grace Snell——Love, Marriage is not a failure, she contends, but the men have been at fault. She has had un-bounded happiness while love's dream has remained young; she thinks love should renew its youth even by fre-quent changes, if they are needsaar.
